THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE A Synopsis of the Document Read This Afternoon. WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 7 .- The following s a synopsis of the President's Message:

It opens with a reference to the Centennial Year, and the progress made by the country during the past century in population, agriculture, commerce and general prosperity.

The opening part of the message is devote chiefly to a review of the progress of the Nation, and touches at considerable length upon the gradual extension of territory, the advancement in agriculture and mechanics with the developments of our resources.

the developments of our resources.

Referring to the political equality, it says:
We are a Republic whereof one man is as good as another before the law. It is of great importance that all should be possessed of education and intelligence enough to casts vote with a right understanding of its meaning. Men can not for any considerable period oppose a successful resistance to tyranny and oppression from the educated few, but will be inevitably sunk into acquiescence to the will of intelligence, whether creeted by demagoguery or by priestoraft. Hence the education of the masses becomes of great necessity for the preservation of our institutions. They are worth preserving, because they have secured the greatest good to the greatest proportion of the population of any form of government yet devised; and suggests to Congress to consider this subject, and carnestly recommends a constitutional amendment to be submitted to the State Legislatures.

He suggrests the taxation of all property equally except the last resting place of the dead.

Our relations with most of the powers continue of the measure is equally except the last resting place of the dead.

Our relations with most of the powers continue satisfactory. Along with the message is transmitted certain documents showing the condition of foreign relations. The following is given on the Spanish question: In March last the arrangement was made through Mr. Cushing for the payment by Spain to the United States of 180,000 for the relief of the Virginius sufferers and their representatives. The payments were fully and spontaneously anticipated by Spain, and directions have been given by the United States Government for distribution of the money.

On the Cuban question he says: No evidence is furnished of an approaching end of the ruintous conflict which has been raging for saven years in the neighboring Island of Cuba. The same disregard of the laws of civilized warfare and of the just demands of humanity which have herefore called forth expressame disregario of the laws of civilized warfare and of the just demands of humanity which have herefore called forth expressions of condemnation from the nations of Christendom have continued to blacken the sad acene. Desolation, ruin and pillage are pervading the rich fields of one of the most fortile and productive regions of the carth;

and the incendiary's torch firing plantations and valuable factories and buildings, is the agent marking alternate advance or retreat of contending parties. The protracted continuance of the strife serrously affects the interest of all commercial nations, but those of the United States more than others by reason of close proximity, its larger trade and intercourse with Cuba, and frequent and intimate personal and social relations which have grown up between its citizens and those of the islands and, moreover, the property of our cutzens in cuba is large, and is rendered insceure and depreciated fiv value and capacity of production, by the continuation of the surife and the unnatural mode of its conduct.

After regretting that Spain has not been able to establish peace in her colony he goes on: In contests of this nature, where a considerable body of people who have attempted to free themselves of the control of the superior government, have reached such a point in the occupation of territory, in power, and in to free themselves of the control of the superior government, have reached such a point in the occupation of territory, in power, and in general organization, as to constitute in fact a body politic, having a Government in substance as well as in name, possessed of the elements of statility and equipped with the machinery for the administration of internal policy sod the execution of its laws, and prepared and able to administer justice at home as well as in its dealing with other powers, it is within the province of those other powers to recognize its existence, as a new and independent nation, and in such cases other nations simply deal with an actually existing condition of things, and recognize as one of the powers of the earth that body politic which, possessing the necessary elements, has in fact become now a power. In a word, the creation of a new State is a fact. To establish the condition of things essential to the recognition of this fact there must be a people occupying a known territory, united under some known and defined form of government, acknowledged by those subject thereto, in which the functions of Government are administered by the usual methods, competent to mete out justice to citizens and strangers, to affort remedies for public and for private wrongs, and able to assume the relative international obligations, and capable of performing the corresponding international duties resulting from its acquisition of the rights of sovereignty and power, should exist complete in its organization, ready to take, and able to maintain, its place among the nations of the earth.

He admite that no such organization has been effected in Caba as omities it to recognition as an independent State, and proceeds to discuss the question of beligerent; internation of beligerents, he says: Considered as a question of expediency, I regard the accordance of beligerents, he says: Considered as a question of expediency, I regard the accordance of beligerents. government, have reached such a point occupation of territory, in power, and in defining the facts which are necessary to entithe an armed force to the rights of beligerents, he says: Considered as a question of expediency, I regard the accordance of beligerent rights still to be as nawise and promature as I regard at to be at present indefensible. As a measure of right, such recognition entails upon the country according the rights which flow from it difficult and complicated duties, and requires the action from the contending parties, of the strict observance of their rights and obligations. It confers the right of search upon the high seas by vessels of both parties. It would subject the carrying of arms and ammunition of war, which now may be transported freely and without interruption, in the vissels of the United States, to detention. Apart from any quossion of theoretical right, I am satisfied that, while the accordance of belligerent rights to the Insurgents in Cuba might give them a hope and fonucement to protract the struggle, it would be but a defusive hope, and would not remove the evils which this Govermment and its people are experiencing, but would draw the United States into complications which it has waited long and already suffered much to avoid.

After thus disposing of the question of recognition, he concludes that foreign intervention and mediation are the only means left for bringing about a termination of the strift. The Government of Spain has recently submitted to our Minister at Madrid certain proposals, which may be found to be the basis if not the actual submission of terms to meet the requirements of particular griefs of which this Government has felt itself entitled to complain. These proposals have not yet reached me in their full text. On their arrival they will be taxen into careful consideration, and it may be looped will lead to a satisfactory adjustment of the question to which they refer, and remove the possibilities of future interference, such as has given rise to our just complaints. The Mexican troubles are next referred to at same length. The maranding excursions into the United States on our Mexican border have been the subject of renewed remonstrances by the United States to the Mexican Government, but without effect.

I am happy to announce that Venzuela offered no objection to paying to us the share of its revenue allowed towards the extinguishment of the claims of foreignors.

It is to be regretted, however, that payments on account of the United States, are still so meagre in amount and that the stipulation of the treaty in this respect should have been so signally disregarded.

The President discusses then the Allantic cable monopoly, and makes certain important recommendations for their better control and regulation in the interest of the people and the Government.

He invites the attention of Congress to the meessity of regulating by law the status of American women who may marry foreigners, and of defining the status of children born of American women who may marry foreigners, and of the first of the people of the President to be able to approve of any measure of Congress, looking effectively towards (securing re

ANOTHER MARINE DISASTER.

One Hundred and Fifty Lives Lost.

LONDON, Dec. 7 .- It is believed that the North German steamship Deutschland is ashore at some point in the North Sea. A boat belonging to the Deutschland, with two dead bodies and one live person, has arrived at Sheerness.

LONDON, Dec. 7 .- The Admiralty officers say that the boat picked up was washed away from the Deutschland. It is supposed that she struck at some point in Kentish Knock sands. A tug has been sent out to search for her and render assistance.

London, Dec. 7-Afternoon-It is now learned that one boat left the Steam Ship Deutschland before the one picked up at Sheerness. It is believed that one hundred and fifty lives are lost. Details of the disaster are auxiously awaited. LONDON Dec. 7 .- The Deutschland dis aster proves more serious than at first apprehended. The steamship, with a large number of emigrants on board, grounded on the Kentish Knock on Monday during a heavy gale.

All on board were drowned. The steamer has since keeled over, and she was full of water when the tide rose.

THE LATEST. LONDON, Dec. 7.—The tugboat Liver-cool has arrived at the port of Harwick with a number of the crew and passengers of the wreck steamer Deutschland. They report that fifty persons were drowned. Former reports of the total loss are therefore erroneous.

Report of the Secretary of War.

The Secretary of War opens his report by announcing a marked Improvement in the morale of the service.

The desertions for the fiscal year ending June 80, 1874, were 4,806; of re-enlistments, 699; the number of sergeants re-enlisted, 149. The desertions for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1875, were 2,512; re-enlistments, 1,986; sergeants re-enlisted, 347. No better evidence can be furnished of the improved condition of the service than by presentation of the foregoing figures.

He then regrets the presence of married men in the service, as it is both injurious to military discipline and to their families. ing June 80, 1874, were 4,806; of re-en-

The work on new buildings and Gov-iamlies.

The work on new buildings and Government Cemeteries is then reviewed, and a statement made of the aid furnished by this Department.

He next says: I sgain call the attention of Congress to the recommendation contained in my last annual report for the enactment of a system of annuities for the families of deceased officers, by voluntary deductions from the monthly pay of those holding commissions in the army. Certainly if private companies can make money by an annuity system, it is in the power of the Government at least to render itself secure in extending "similar beneficent aid. It is proposed that this aid shall be extended through the agency of the Government, without eventual expense to the public Treasury. It is argued that the money to be deducted under the operation of the proposed scheme is worth to the Government a certain per centage of interest. The well-settled principles governing lite insurance would be applicable to this plan, and the annuity tables would be prepared by the most careful and critical calculations. The science of probabilities has reached great precision in those computations entering into life insurance, but after certain tables had been used twenty years, more or less, corrections could be made if they were found deficient, which would more perfectly accomplish the object of the scheme, viz: the rendering of substantial assistance to the families of deceased officers of the army, without actual expense to the Government.

After announcing that the work of im-After announcing that the work of improving the seaboard defenses has been satisfactorily pushed, he refers to the survey of the Mississippi river as follows: In the improvement of the Mississippi river the want of a detailed and accurate survey has long been felt. The need of such a survey is becoming more and more urgent from year to year, as engineering improvements in aid of commerce become necessary. The partial surveys of detached portions of the river which have from time to time been made for special improvements are not sufficient for the discussion of plans for protecting the river against floods—a quescient for the discussion of pians for pre-tecting the river against floods—a ques-tion which is now of much importance— or for other general engineer improve-ments, which should be based on de-tailed maps, exhibiting not only the con-dition of the river at the time of the survey, but giving the means of discovering uture changes. The organization and instruments of the lake survey furnish he means of making the survey of the river accurately and economically, and I recommend that the work be placed in its hands. The following estimate of Eugineers is

After calling attention to our National Park, he concludes as follows:

After calling attention to our National Park, he concludes as follows:

The total expense of making a full and satisfactory exhibit of our war materials has heretofore been estimated at $200,000. Congress, at the last session, appropriated only $133,000 of this amount, and burdened the appropriation with a pro-rate share of the expense of any building that may be erected for the accommodation of the entire government exhibit. Experience has shown that the amount thus left tor the practical exhibit of the War Department is inadequate, and I recommend that Congress supplement the appropriation already made with a further one, granting sufficient to make up the sum of $200,000 for the practical exhibit of the department. This amount is set down at $89,000, which includes an item of $22,000 as resimbursement, for moneys expended in 000, which includes an item of $22,000 a CINCINNATI, Dec. 7 .-- 3:10 P. M. We quote gold to-day 14% buying, 14% sell-ing for coin, and 14% for gold checks on New York.

There is a fair demand for money to-day.

Supply ample at previous rates.

New York Exchange is dull and heavy. It is worth 1-10 discount buying, and par selling. Sterling is steady at 4.54 to 4.59 gold.

We work Givernment bonds as follows:
